

I moved to Brafferton and Helperby nearly two years ago (2024) and quickly grew to love village life. What stood out to me straight away was the strong sense of community and how actively people get involved.

Since moving here, I have become part of the village Community Association and enjoy contributing to local events and initiatives. Alongside this, I have a strong interest in politics and community life.

I currently work part-time at the George Hotel in Easingwold while studying for my A Levels at home.

As a Parish Councillor, I am keen to represent residents, support community initiatives, and help ensure Helperby and Brafferton continue to be great places to live.
